Partner Jim Harrod will serve as a panelist at The George Washington University Law School's Second Annual Class Action Case Law and Practice Review Conference. This in-person event will review case law and practice developments that have arisen in class actions during the past year, with discussions led by panels of experts, including 6 federal judges and 30 prominent practitioners.

Jim's panel is focused on Judicial Consideration of Lead Plaintiffs' Ex Ante Fee Agreements and Parties' Fee Agreements.

Following the conference, the Center will consider developing best practices addressing class-action case-management problems identified at the conference. Judges and practitioners attending the conference will be given the first opportunity to join teams drafting these influential class action best practices and guidelines under the auspices of the Center with assistance of its Scholars Council.
