

BLB&G Partner Katie Sinderson Serves as Panelist at PLI's Program, "Securities Litigation 2022: From Investigation to Trial"

March 25, 2022

Partner Katie Sinderson will serve as a panelist at the PLI's Securities Litigation 2022 Program: From Investigation to Trial, which features experienced and leading practitioners who will focus on best practices for building new strategies and tactics in the ever-changing landscape of securities litigation.

The program will dive into issues that can arise in the most complex securities matters, starting from the initial government investigation to the filing of civil cases to either settlement or trial. This includes: how to approach the initial investigation and work with state and federal regulators in the interests of your clients; assess the civil complaints and coordinate multi-district actions; litigate the case through the pleadings, discovery, class certification and summary judgment; approach mediation and settlement of a securities action; try a securities litigation or arbitration; and approach and assess ethical issues associated with complex securities litigation.

Katie's panel, Securities Litigation: Trial of the Civil Action, will discuss:

- Plaintiffs' perspective: amassing and presenting effective evidence
- Defendants' perspective: defending the securities case
- Special considerations for cases governed by Private Securities Litigation Reform Act
