

Christopher Redlich

Managing Director of Information Services, New York
212.554.1476
Christopher.Redlich@blbglaw.com

Christopher Redlich, BLB&G's Managing Director of Information Services, has more than 30 years of experience providing litigation support to major law firms and corporations. Chris is responsible for overseeing BLB&G's integrated Information Services department to create a more streamlined, efficient, and forward-thinking approach and infrastructure for all of the firm's information services and technologies.

In his role, Chris oversees the firm's document management system and maintains and secures all of the technology utilized by the firm's litigation support functions. He also leads the firm's in-house litigation support team, helps administer e-discovery services in complex litigation, and leads the firm's efforts in identifying the best technological tools for use in discovery processes.

Before joining BLB&G, Chris served as Litigation Support Manager of the Americas for Allen & Overy LLP (now A&O Shearman). He received his B.S. in Criminal Justice/Forensic Science from Saint Leo University and his Associate's in Computer Science and Business Administration from Raritan Valley Community College. Chris holds several professional certifications, including in information system management, computer programming, web development, technical support and operations, and project management.

Education

- Saint Leo University, B.S., Criminal Justice/Forensic Science
- Raritan Valley Community College, A.S., Computer Science and Business Administration